

ANNOUNCING
ONLINE WRITING WORKSHOP
WITH AWARD-WINNING AUTHOR, COLUMNIST & SPEAKER
HEATHER KING

This is an invitation to discover our unique and powerful stories and the profound transformation that occurs by committing them to paper. We'll learn to trust our creative impulses, shape our experiences into compelling narratives, and unleash a sense of creative purpose.

Through writing exercises, group discussion, and the exchange of notes we'll build a sense of fellowship and community. The emphasis will be on ordering our lives and hearts to our craft.

CREDENTIALS

I've been providing editing, critique, workshop and coaching services for writers of fiction, nonfiction, and poetry for over ten years.

I've published twelve books of memoir, essay collections, and creative non-fiction. I've written and recorded over 30 slice-of-life commentaries for NPR's "All Things Considered." I write an award-winning weekly arts and culture column for Angelus News, the archdiocesan newspaper of LA.

I'm also a nationwide speaker, lecturer, and retreat giver.

FORMAT

The online workshop (with one-on-one instruction, editing, and/or coaching-critique available separately) is for those interested in honing their nonfiction, memoir, fiction, or poetry writing skills.

We'll submit up to six pages from our works-in-progress before we meet. Each class will consist of a mini-lesson, brief excerpt from a stellar book or essay, writing prompt, and notes.
